South Korea saw record-high growth in international student numbers in 2017, with the Chinese students making up the largest proportion, according to data released by the National Institute for International Education.

The 18.8% increase will come as good news to the Ministry of Education after international student enrolments dropped in the 2012-2014 period. As a

South Korea records fourth straight year of strong growth

26 Sep 2018

Short on time? Here are the highlights:

- International student numbers in South Korea continue to climb this year with strong year-over-year growth for 2018, and overall growth of nearly 70% since 2014
- Vietnam has been a major factor in these gains over the last five years and now accounts for nearly 20% of all foreign enrolment in the country
- This recent-year performance has left South Korea well on track to reach its long-term goal of hosting 200,000 visiting students by 2023

Mark South Korea down as the latest study destination to be tracking towards its long-term growth goals. The most recent data from the National Institute for International Education (NIIED) reveals another year of substantial growth in 2018 when comparing foreign enrolment in the country as of April 2018 to the same period in the year before. The NIIED is an agency of the South Korean Ministry of Education.

The total number of international students in Korea reached 142,205 this year, up nearly 15% over 2017 and with a total year-over-year gain of just under 20,000 students.

This makes 2018 the fourth consecutive year of foreign enrolment growth for South Korea, and adds up to an overall increase of 68% since 2015 (when the total number of visiting students in the country had declined to just under 85,000).

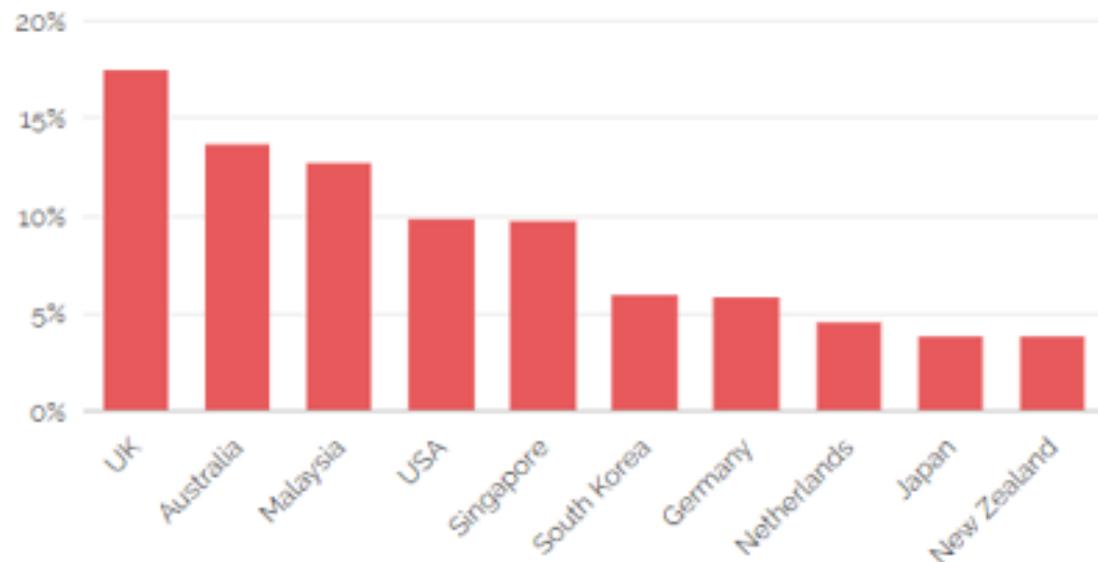

And this continuing growth has put South Korea well on track to reach its longer-term goal to host 200,000 foreign students by 2023.
