IS STUDENT MOBILITY MUTUALLY BENEFICIAL? ACHIEVING POSITIVE HOST COMMUNITY IMPACT IN LEARNING ABROAD

Christopher Ziguras, RMIT University
John Lucas, ISEP
Destination regions of Australian learning abroad students, 2016

Area of circles corresponds to student numbers
Half of all students are travelling for less than four weeks.

Chart reproduced from Students from Australian Universities in Learning Abroad 2017, Australian Universities International Directors Forum.
So what’s the problem?

- Host community impact is rarely conscious focus during design and planning (Wood, 2011)
- Reinforcing a white saviour complex (Illich, 1968)
- Exploitative (directly or indirectly), economically and otherwise
- Voyeuristic, disempowering through disrespecting and disregarding local knowledge and experience Institutions and provider organizations should be aware of and sensitive to host community cultural norms and expectations in program planning and execution, including:

a) An awareness of and efforts to minimize any negative impact on the host society and community;

b) Orientation of participants that imparts information needed to avoid conduct that could have a negative impact on themselves, the host country, or the image of their home country….

c) The creation and enforcement of a code of conduct that appropriately consider host societal and cultural norms and environmental conditions;

d) Reciprocal opportunities that benefit the sending and receiving country’s educational institutions, students and broader communities should be explored;

e) Establishing and maintaining policies and relationships that support environmentally responsible program management, including but not limited to:

i. Fostering an awareness of and minimizing harmful individual and program-related environmental and social impact;

ii. Considering and preparing for the environmental, economic, and social consequences of the presence (or departure) of the program, in both program design and management;

iii. Soliciting community input and utilizing local experts, resources, goods and services, when appropriate.

iv. Supporting local community assets such as schools, libraries, health programs, and conservation projects, when feasible.
‘First do no harm’ for Gen Z – Social media ethics

How To Communicate The World:
A Social Media Guide For Volunteers and Travelers

Volunteering programs are expanding rapidly. An increasing number of people spend their holidays or gap years travelling, while at the same time doing something meaningful and different. The world of social media poses both challenges and opportunities. This is your go-to guide before and during your trip. Use these four guiding principles to ensure that you avoid the erosion of dignity and respect the right to privacy while documenting your experiences abroad.

checklist
before you post on social media:

✔ Ask yourself: “What is my intention with sharing this post?”
✔ Gain informed consent from the person in the picture and/or the caretaker. If you can’t explain why you are taking a photo, find a translator.
✔ Know the name and background of the people portrayed.
✔ Offer the person in the photo a copy.
✔ Avoid sweeping and simplified generalizations, include informative text with names, place, etc.
✔ Be respectful of different cultures and traditions.
✔ Ask yourself: “Would I have appreciated to be portrayed in the same manner?”
✔ Avoid sensitive, vulnerable situations and locations such as hospitals and health clinics.
✔ Don’t portray yourself as the hero in the story conveyed.
✔ Challenge the perceptions, bring down stereotypes!
Economic benefits to host communities

• Several studies find that the most important local benefits are economic
• Directing financial impact consciously (wide and direct)
• ISEP Ghana
• Townsville North Queensland EduTourism Consortium (partners on the right)
• ActionAid Myanmar CBT
Common principles

• Commitment to social justice (overt consideration of structural inequalities)

• Reciprocity (mutual benefit)

• Co-design with local partners
Methods

• Working with ethical partners
• Pre-departure learning about key issues
• Cultural interpreters on site
• Both-ways learning:
  • Being taught by those involved (outsiders being interested in and valuing their experience)
• Learning opportunities for local participants as well as visitors
In designing learning abroad to ensure positive outcomes for host communities, we also:

• Maximise the likelihood of developing sustainable long-term partnerships
• Enhance the experience and learning of our students
• Strengthen the reputation of our institutions at home and abroad Questions?